Implementing programmes

Patrick Crittenden, Sustainable Business

Energy Efficiency Training Week, Industry Stream, Pretoria, South Africa, October 2019

Learning outcomes

This session will focus on developing your capabilities to:
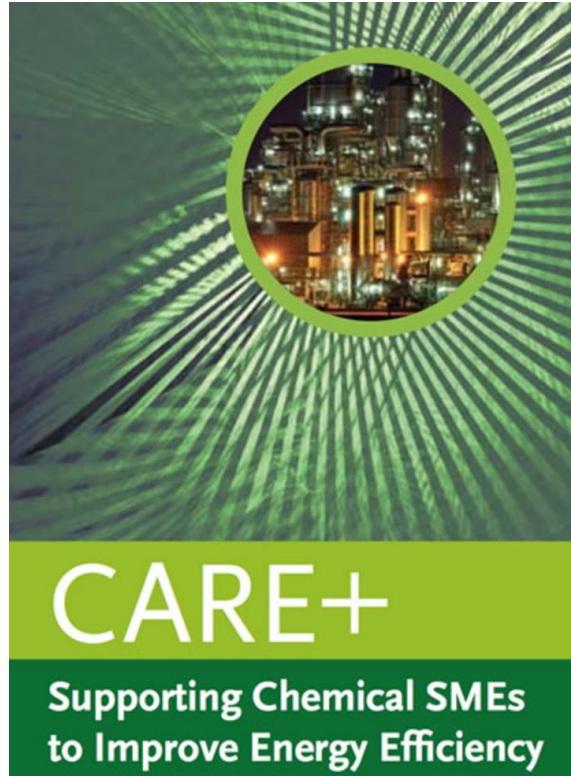

- Involve NGOs, local governments, other ministries, industry and other stakeholders as partners to leverage outcomes from limited budgets

- Design a programme 'pilot'

- Consider options for launching programmes

- Develop strategies for managing the implementation process

energy
Department:
Energy
REPUBLIC OF SOUTH AFRICA

gef

UNIDO

iea

The benefits of a programme pilot

- Lower risk for all involved which can make it easier to get honest and constructive feedback

- 'Reality check' on the resources required to deliver the programme from both a government and industry perspective

- Case studies can provide an important output from the process – they demonstrate the beneficial outcomes of the programme and 'how to' approach it

The European Chemical Industry Council CARE+ programme

- Partner countries conducted a gap analysis of energy management performance to establish needs

- Draft tools including a Self Audit Guide and Best Practice Manual were trialled to ensure that they were user friendly and effective for the target audience (chemical industry SMEs)

CARE+

Supporting Chemical SMEs to Improve Energy Efficiency

CASE STUDY

Programme pilots

- Who has participated in or managed a programme pilot?

- What was the approach?

- What changes were made as a result of the pilot?

INTERACTIVE ACTIVITY

Programme launch example

Mexico 'a model of energy efficiency' in region, says minister

CASE STUDY

Managing the implementation process

- ✓ Maintain ongoing communication with industry to manage expectations and address concerns as they arise

- ✓ Ensure that industry gets that assistance that has been promised if it is part of the programme

- ✓ Ensure that programme components reinforce each other rather than operating in isolation

- ✓ Articulate the multiple benefits achieved through the program on a regular basis